January Units Topic

Amending the U.S. Constitution: the Whys, Whens, Wherefores, and What Ifs

Early in 2016, LWVUS announced a new consensus position on the parameters for convening an Article V Constitutional Convention of the states. The imprecise wording of the U.S. Constitution leaves “many unanswered questions about the powers and processes” of such a convention which would have the authority to propose and ratify a Constitutional amendment without involving Congress.

At the January unit meetings, we will be taking a look at the new position and discussing when, why, and how amendments to our constitution can come about, and what amendments might be proposed during an Article V Constitutional Convention. Reading website for information on the topic. <http://forum.lwv.org/category/member-resources/our-work/constitutional-amendment-study>
